Sandy Opitz: It is up

00:08:15.151,00:08:18.151

Kari Jaeckel-Rodriguez: I can see it

00:42:11.232,00:42:14.232

Kari Jaeckel-Rodriguez: <---this is a great question!

00:42:55.433,00:42:58.433

Scott E: Agree!!!!

00:47:30.990,00:47:33.990

Scott E: Thank you for a great presentation, my family loves using public state and federal parks as often as we can!

00:48:33.349,00:48:36.349

Katie Cunningham: Do you have any thought on how we can effectively bring some of these concerns to the forefront of public policy, especially during the current times?

00:48:45.588,00:48:48.588

David Hoffman: How does owning a cabin in the woods differ from wimpy ca,ping?

00:51:02.752,00:51:05.752

D Webster: wimpy camping is often an affordable proxy for a vacation taken by people who would rather be in a hotel or similar but do not have the means. I realised this when camping near a beach in Spain.

00:51:44.761,00:51:47.761

Diane M Samdahl: In the late 19th. century when we were setting aside land for parks, we were also pushing Native Americans off that land. Camping then led to White Americans mimicking many of those native traditions. How do we reconcile this?

00:53:04.735,00:53:07.735

Vicky: What hunting guidelines exist in federal areas and national parks? Is it allowed and if so, are the seasons the same as other places in the state in which the area is located, or are these areas protected from hunting?

01:01:43.725,01:01:46.725

Vicky: Thank you!

01:02:04.822,01:02:07.822

Susan McFaul: Thanks!

01:02:09.123,01:02:12.123
